The Acorn
Welcome

Dear PJSA members, colleagues and friends,

Welcome to Canadian Mennonite University and the Menno Simons College campus. We welcome you to our two campuses in Winnipeg for this 2019 annual PJSA conference. Our theme this year, “Local Alignments, Global Upheavals,” is inspired by the coinciding centenary celebration of the Winnipeg General Strike and seeks to draw out discussion regarding the range of challenges and opportunities we face in our communities and globally on a daily basis.

This year’s conference will create a wide variety of spaces for our community of scholars, activists, practitioners and advocates working for peace and justice. We will examine current trends and ideas and speak out of life experiences as a way to explore peaceful approaches for guiding social change while challenging the legitimacy of violent systems, re-asserting Indigenous jurisdiction, and ensuring safety and sanctuary for vulnerable peoples and refugees experiencing forced migration and internal persecution. We have an agenda full of provocative and thoughtful speakers who will push and inspire our thinking. We, your hosts, are excited to host these conversations and are hopeful that each of us will depart with our heads full of new ideas and hearts that have been moved, lodged in a context of expanded networks of support. There are many people to thank.

Our PJSA executive director, Michael Loadenthal, has ably led our local planning committee—which includes Jodi Dueck-Read, Neil Funk-Unrau, Evelyn Voight and Mahdis Azarmandi—through the hoops of conference planning. Swasti Bhattacharyya has once again taken up the auction with great energy. Jobb Arnold, Julie Hyde and Edmund Pries stepped in whenever asked. Many people have engaged in the planning of the three plenary sessions as speakers, moderators, emcees, musicians and elders.

We hope you enjoy the conference, build relationships and emerge with new ideas and zest for the challenges of our peace and justice work.

Wendy Kroeker
PJSA Conference Chair

Sadie-Phoenix has participated and organized numerous community events, rallies, marches with a focus around Indigenous rights, systemic racism and colonialism, Indigenous climate justice and youth empowerment.
Geraldine ‘Gramma’ Shingoose

60, is a familiar face in Winnipeg’s Indigenous community as an activist and elder. When there’s an important event in Winnipeg’s Indigenous community, Gerry Shingoose is there — often at the front, with a prayer, a pipe, a drum, an open heart and exactly the right words. Geraldine Shingoose was just five years old when two cars pulled up to her home near Hudson Bay, Sask. One was a police car and the other carried people from the Muskowekwan residential school who had come to take her, her older sister, Darlene, and their older brother, George, to the residential school near Lestock. Shingoose, who testified twice before the Truth and Reconciliation Commission and has visited schools to share her story with students, was finally able to escape residential school when she was 13. Gerry Shingoose eventually reconnected with her father, who revived her awareness of her culture. It was the Idle No More movement, though, that Shingoose said helped her reconnect to her culture and find her strength when she was faltering.

Sarah Fontaine-Sinclair (Anishinaabe: Nimizhien-nibikwe)

meaning “the light that dances on the water.” She is an award-winning speaker who advocates for our environment, participating in the Lake Winnipeg Water Walk and marches for Murdered and Missing Indigenous Women as well as a leader in the #FridaysForFuture education for climate change movement. She also plays the flute, soccer, and performs in improv and musical theatre productions. When she has time, she is a grade eight student in Winnipeg School Division.

Niigaanwewidam James Sinclair

Is Anishinaabe (St. Peter’s/Little Peguis) and Professor in the Department of Native Studies at the University of Manitoba. He is a regular commentator on Indigenous issues nationally on CTV, CBC, and APTN and internationally in The Guardian and Al-Jazeera America. His written work can be found in the pages of The Exile Edition of Native Canadian Fiction and Drama, newspapers like The Guardian, The Globe and Mail and The Winnipeg Free Press, and online with CBC Books: Canada Writes. Niigaan is the co-editor of the award-winning Manitowapow: Aboriginal Writings from the Land of Water (Highwater Press, 2011) Centering Anishinaabeg Studies: Understanding the World Through Stories (Michigan State University Press, 2013) and The Winter We Danced: The Past, the Future, and the Idle No More Movement (Arbeiter Ring, 2014). He is also the Editorial Director of The Debwe Series with Portage and Main Press.
Hector Vazquez

Is originally from Naolinco, Mexico and is a PhD candidate at the University of Victoria (Canada). His dissertation will address the embedding of music with Indigenous roots into Mexico’s national elementary curriculum. Hector holds a Bachelor of Music in Performance (Universidad Veracruzana) and a Master’s degree in Education (Monterrey Institute of Technology and Higher Education). Currently, his research is funded by the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council (SSHRC) of Canada. He is the Founder and Executive Director of the Mateo Oliva Oliva Non-profit Association and the Founder and Director of the Festival Internacional de Música Naolinco, both of which aim to encourage equal access to music and music education.

Margo Tamez

Is a Lipan Apache author of the Hada’idla Nde’ (“Lightning Storm People”), Konitsaai Nde’ (“Big Water People”) and an enrolled member of the Lipan Apache Band of Texas. Tamez is an Associate Professor of Indigenous Studies, in the Community, Culture, and Global Studies Department at the University of British Columbia, unceded Syilx territory, Okanagan campus. She is the author of Naked Wanting (2003), Raven Eye (2007) and numerous chapters, essays, and scholarly articles. A scholar, poet, and human rights defender, Tamez grew up in South Texas, the Lower Rio Grande Valley and along the Texas-Mexico border. Her prose reflects the critical understanding of historical processes and on-going effects of historical erasure on Indigenous peoples, making crucial links between history and present forces (colonization, militarization) impacting Indigenous peoples from the region bifurcated by the U.S.-Mexico border who remained in traditional places but largely ignored by the state.

Ynestra King

Ynestra King is an ecofeminist writer, teacher, oral historian and activist. She is a native of Selma, Alabama where she first observed the practice of nonviolent resistance, which was to become a lifelong preoccupation. She is an originator of ecofeminism and cofounded Women and Life on Earth, and convened the first ever ecofeminist gathering in 1980, which organized the antimilitarist Women’s Pentagon Action, contributing to the ecology and peace encampment movements of the 1980s and 1990s. Ynestra has taught at several colleges and universities including the New School and Columbia University. Her work continues to be concerned with feminism, climate change, embodied politics, community, and the practice of radical nonviolence. She continues to be affiliated with the Institute for Social Ecology, where she has taught for many years. She is active in Writers Resist and the Board of the A. J. Muste Foundation and strives to live a life of radical amazement.
2019 Award Winners

Anthony Dest, PhD

Best Dissertation Award: After the War: Violence and Resistance in Colombia

Earned his Ph.D. in Latin American Studies from the University of Texas at Austin in 2019. His research explores how people struggle against violence, racism, and dispossession throughout the Americas by analyzing the politics and conditions of solidarity. His book manuscript examines why “peace” feels like war in spite of the 2016 Peace Accords between the Colombian government and the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC). Dr. Dest has received fellowships from the National Science Foundation, Social Science Research Council, Inter-American Foundation, and Fulbright to support his research. His teaching interests include: race and identity in Latin America; anthropology of development; peace and conflict studies; and social movement theory. He previously worked at the Washington Office on Latin America (WOLA) and is currently on the coordinating committee of the Afro-Colombian Solidarity Network (ACSN).

Modupe Oshikoya, PhD

Best Dissertation Honorable Mention: Exploring the Impact of Insurgencies on Gender-Based Violence and the Nigerian Armed Forces: The Boko Haram Case

Is currently a tenure-track professor in the political science department at Virginia Wesleyan University. Her current research interests include intra-state conflict, security and gender-based violence in Africa. She recently graduated with a Ph.D. in Global Governance and Human Security from the University of Massachusetts Boston (UMass Boston). Her dissertation examined military violence committed against civilians in conflict zones in Nigeria. She obtained her BA with honors in Politics and Development Studies and an MSc in International Politics with a focus on African Politics at the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS), University of London, where her master's thesis, titled ‘The Logic of Violence in Civil War’ focused on the civil war in Sierra Leone. Modupe previously worked for the House of Commons research service for six years, providing research briefings on international affairs. She also worked for the British Red Cross on their Disaster Management Programme that helped UK citizens affected by the 2004 Indian Ocean Earthquake and Tsunami. She co-authored a chapter in the 'The Handbook of Civil Society in Africa' (published October 2013), which looks at the effect of civil society organizations on democracy and governance structures in Africa.

Katelin Helene Siemens Neufeld, PhD

Best Dissertation Honorable Mention: The Political Solidarity Measure: Development and Validation in University Student Samples

research interests reflect her upbringing in Treaty 1 Territory. Broadly, her research aims to understand and promote social justice, typically in the context of Indigenous and non-Indigenous relations in Canada. She does so using both qualitative and quantitative methods, which are influenced by her training in experimental social psychology and psychometrics, as well as teachings from Indigenous Elders and community members. Currently, Katelin is a Research Associate with the Canadian Reconciliation Barometer (Principal Investigator: Katherine Starzyk) at the University of Manitoba, where she also earned her PhD in Social Psychology.

Sydney Tisch

Best Undergraduate Paper Award: We Each Have Stories to Tell: A Queer, Activist History of ACT UP/Chicago

is a graduate of Pace University with a BA in Peace and Justice Studies and Women's and Gender Studies and a minor in Queer Studies. Her work, focusing on queer justice and histories, has been published in the Dyson Society of Fellows’ peer-reviewed journal Transactions and, most recently, in the August 2019 edition of the International Feminist Journal of Politics. Sydney has also worked as a research assistant to Drs. Emily Bent and Matthew Bolton on topics regarding young feminists’ experiences at the United Nations and the humanitarian impact of nuclear testing in the Pacific region, respectively. Her research with Dr. Matthew Bolton was published by Pace University's International Disarmament Institute and circulated at the United Nations’s First Committee on Disarmament and International Security. Some of her research interests include uncovering ignored queer histories, understanding how nonviolent movements function, decoding international debates on nuclear disarmament, playing with “campy” media and its political implications, and exploring the violence of gender/being gendered, among other interdisciplinary issues. She is actively involved with queer activism, such as a student-based campaign she spearheaded that demanded that the president of Pace to release a statement reaffirming the university’s support for transgender students in reaction to President Trump’s October 2018 transphobic memo, making Pace the first New York City-based university to do so.
